Dear Ms van der Plaat

Re: *Criminal conduct

On 16th September 2015, and during a NSW Police investigation into the activities of Terence Goldberg of Turner Freeman Lawyers, the NSW Police wrote to me and stated that 'Inquiries are still ongoing with the Law Society of NSW as to the nature of previous complaints made against Terence Goldberg.'

As you are quite aware, the NSW Police commenced a criminal investigation into Mr Goldberg's activities due to several false statements as made in an Application for Assessment of Solicitor/Client Costs, which duly enabled Mr Goldberg to improperly obtain a judgment debt in the District Court in the amount of $124,661.90 against a party for whom he did not act. Mr Goldberg acted for the four opposing parties in the matter.

You are quite aware also, that the complaints as made to the Law Society of NSW related directly to the above (as well as to other various matters of misconduct), with a copy of the aforementioned Application for Assessment of Solicitor/Client Costs being made available to the Law Society during the Society's then own live investigation into Mr Goldberg's misdeeds, which, as you know, preceded the NSW Police's separate criminal investigation.

You are aware that the Law Society, and despite indisputable evidence of wrongdoing on the part of Mr Goldberg being provided to it, dismissed each and every complaint as made in relation to Mr Goldberg's extraordinary conduct.

Given no sanction was made against Terence Goldberg by the NSW Police, the Law Society of NSW must have misled the police in their criminal investigation and enquiries.

Yours faithfully

Symn Waters
